

I am opposed to the proposed mandatory program recordings. Non-commercial radio stations are bombarded with many expenses and have limited resources. If the FCC wishes to mandate such an activity, it will add a hardship to these stations with limited funds and staff. In addition, the burden of proof should be placed on the person making the complaint and/or the FCC. What would happen if mandatory recordings are required and a station doesn't have it due to technical issues? What additional burden of proof would then be placed on a station? Thank you for accepting my comments. Dennise M. Kowalczyk
